

Initial Court Appearance

A Magistrate Judge advises a defendant of the charges filed and determines whether there is probable cause to believe that an offense has been committed. Defendants who are unable to afford counsel are advised of their right to a court-appointed attorney. During this hearing, the Court also considers if it is appropriate for the defendant to be released to the community pending resolution of their case.